The Safe Routes to School National Partnership is hosting a free webinar on how safe routes to schools and active transportation can improve the economies of local communities.

The webinar will discuss:

- The economic benefits of increasing physical activity and improving walkability in the built environment;
- How much money is actually spent on bicycling and walking in comparison to other transportation modes;
- How bicycling and walking has saved money in selected communities.

Speakers:

- Jim Sallis, Active Living Research, University of San Diego
- Robert Ping, Safe Routes to Schools National Partnership
