Why Aligning Efforts is Important

Flintridge Center in Pasadena

“Improving the Quality of Life in Northwest Pasadena and Altadena”

- Staffing/service levels for School and City reduced along with revenues from the state
- Pasadena’s 2012 Quality of Life Index cites improving educational attainment and promoting strong public schools as a top priority
 - > Achievement gap impacts health of the City
 - Starts early and lasts throughout life:
 - » impacts future employability
 - » linked to social and economic problems that impact community health
- Negative perceptions about public schools has economic impact

College and Career Readiness

- Ultimate goal to measure success is college and career readiness
- Economic efforts have moved beyond one agency
- City Manager's Economic Development Task Force recognized that
 - > “in order for Pasadena to further its budding innovation-hub, maintain and expand its broad-base of professional jobs. It is vital that our public school system succeeds in providing our young with creative thinking skills which are the hallmark of the new economy.”
