

INSTITUTE FOR LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Program Coordinator II (Sustainable Communities)

The Institute for Local Government, the non-profit research affiliate of the League of California Cities, the California State Association of Counties (CSAC) and the California Special Districts Association (CSDA) is seeking an experienced program coordinator to support its sustainability program efforts. The position, based in Sacramento, offers an exciting opportunity for an energetic individual who shares the Institute's passion for good government at the local level and the role that sustainability policies and programs can play to save energy and resources, reduce greenhouse gas emissions and create vibrant communities with a high quality of life.

The Program Coordinator II is a journey-level position on ILG's sustainable communities program team. In this capacity, the program coordinator helps plan and execute a variety of critical elements of the program's activities to assist local officials to promote the development of communities that are economically, socially, environmentally and fiscally sustainable. The primary responsibility of the position is to coordinate the Institute's Beacon Program to encourage and support voluntary local action on climate change. In this capacity, the position also carries out program activities related to sustainable economic development, climate change, land use, active transportation, energy efficiency, recycling, and health and the built environment.

The Institute's sustainability work intersects with other areas in which the Institute is serving local government agencies across California, particularly effectively engaging the public in local plans and decisions. As such, the position requires an individual with not only subject matter expertise, but with a commitment to collaboration and communication inside and outside of the Institute.

Institute for Local Government

The Institute for Local Government promotes good government at the local level through practical, impartial and easy-to-use information for local agency officials. Its sustainable communities program provides resources and information to help local officials consider options for making good decisions in key sustainability topic areas, including land use and community design, energy efficiency, reducing greenhouse gas emissions, climate adaptation and resiliency, health and the built environment, and recycling, among others.

The Institute provides sustainability information and resources through the Institute's website, publications, tip sheets, case stories, conferences and workshops, webinars, social media, and technical assistance to local and regional agencies, as well as through the Beacon and Spotlight awards, the Institute's annual sustainability recognition program for city and county agencies.

The Institute is based in Sacramento, California; its primary audience is city, county and special district officials (elected, appointed and staff) in California. Its program areas include Leadership and Governance, Public Engagement, Sustainable Communities, Partnerships and Collaborations, and Civic Youth Engagement and Youth Wellbeing.

Founded in 1955, the Institute has been serving local officials for more than 60 years. With a staff of 12 and a cadre of subject matter consultants and advisors, the Institute leverages the core support it receives from its parent organizations, the League of California Cities, the California State Association of Counties and the California Special Districts Association. Additional support comes from a diversified mix of funding, including foundation grants, state agency and university contracts, and corporate support, as well as revenue from publications and workshops.

Qualifications & Experience

The successful candidate will have three or more years of professional experience in the public, private or nonprofit sector, involving performing public policy research, analysis, communication, marketing, event coordination and outreach. The successful candidate will also share the team's passion for the Institute's mission, goals, vision and values. Included in that is a commitment to the Institute's position of being impartial, nonpartisan and respectful of the diversity of views of California's local leaders. Familiarity with local agency practices and processes is highly desired. In addition, the successful candidate will possess solid organizational skills and the ability to manage multiple concurrent projects and meet deadlines. Other critical skills include excellent communications skills and the ability to work collaboratively as a member of a team.

A bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university with major course work in public policy, communications, public or nonprofit administration and/or a field closely related to sustainability from an accredited college or university is required. An advanced degree or substantial post-graduate work in one or more of the fields referenced above is a plus. Experience or knowledge related to climate change and sustainability, state and local public policy processes and strategic planning are also highly valued.

Work Schedule and Travel

The Institute's normal work week is Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. This position's responsibilities will occasionally require work hours or days outside the normal schedule. Periodic overnight and multi-night out-of-town travel for meetings, presentations and conferences is expected to be a key element of the position.

Employer

The Institute receives staffing services through an agreement for professional services with the League of California Cities. Institute staff are League employees and participate in the League's benefits package, including both defined contribution and defined benefit (CalPERS) retirement plans, medical, dental, life insurance, transit, flex accounts, vacation time and holidays. This position is a grant and contract funded position.
